

BOSTON
CONGRESS OF PUBLIC HEALTH

ORGANIZATIONAL OVERVIEW

5551 Hollywood Avenue, Suite #1040, Hollywood, CA 90028
communications@bcph.org | BCPH.org | BCPHR.org

Boston Congress of Public Health Overview

The Boston Congress of Public Health Inc. (BCPH) is a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization that seeks to democratize access to evidence-based public health resources and platforms. To this end, the agency supports new and emerging thought leaders, including researchers, advocates, and others aligned with the public health field, committed to social justice and health equity.

Our founders and Co-CEOs possess vast leadership experience in health, medicine, leadership, communications, social entrepreneurship, and education:

Dr. Candice Danielle Carpenter
BCPH Co-CEO, Chief of Strategy & Innovation

A physician-serial entrepreneur, Dr. Carpenter is a recognized healthcare innovator, inventor, educator, and advocate for social justice. She is the co-founder and co-CEO of BCPH. For the past five years, she has also served as Co-Editor-in-Chief of BCPHR.

She has been integral to the development of the BCPH Academy, Public Health Institute and Medical Academy, Thought Fellowship, and Editorial Fellowship.

Dr. Circe Gray Le Compte
BCPH Co-CEO, CTO, Dir. of BCPH Studio

Dr. Circe J. Gray LeCompte is a health communications professional and social epidemiologist. She is co-founder and co-CEO of BCPH, and has served as editor-in-chief/co-editor-in-chief of the BCPH Review since its launch at Harvard, in 2013.

She oversees BCPH communications (websites, social media), and helped establish the Thought Fellowship and BCPHR supplements and expedite campaigns.

PARTNERSHIP & SPONSORSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

BCPH offers opportunities for partnership and sponsorships through:

- Partnership agreements and organizational memberships
- Special-issue and supplement publishing
- Co-sponsorship of programs and campaigns
- Promotion to 100K+ constituents via email, social media, and SMS
- Webinars highlighting faculty research, interventions, and special programs
- Customizable trainings, workshops, and conferences

BCPH Programs At-A-Glance

Boston Congress of Public Health Review Programs

BCPH Review (BCPHR)

BCPHR began at Harvard University as the Harvard Public Health Review (HPRH), and is now an independent, academic journal published by the Boston Congress of Public Health. The Journal translates public health thought through the lens of equity and social justice. We have published more than 1400 authors globally, in nearly 90 special editions.

We also publish supplements, as well blogs, vlogs, and podcasts. BCPHR is open access, features a dedicated ISSN and DOI, and is in major indexes. BCPH is available through BCPHR.org, with editions published in 2025 and onward additionally accessible through BCPHReview.org.

BCPHR Editorial Fellowship

This two-month virtual editorial fellowship provides aspiring editorial leaders hands-on training journal management, participating in online trainings and taking turns serving as Reviewers, Associate Editors, and Managing Editors of BCPHR. Fellows manage submissions, review and provide recommendations on manuscripts, communicate with authors, and participate in meetings with editorial staff.

BCPHR
2026

EDITORIAL FELLOWSHIP

BCPH Programs At-A-Glance

Fellowships

BCPH Research Scholars Program

The BCPH Research Scholars Program trains aspiring public health leaders in academic writing and research.

Participants work with a mentor to produce a manuscript, poster, and live webinar presentation. Scholars ultimately submit their articles to BCPHR Review, providing them with experience with the peer review process.

BCPH World Delegate Program

BCPH's World Delegates Program seeks to expand public health leadership and outreach in the U.S. and globally to advance health equity, social justice, and collaboration. Delegates help establish a global communication and leadership network that:

- Strengthens BCPH's reach domestically and abroad
- Showcases emerging voices in public health
- Creates a pipeline for journal submissions, webinars, and conferences
- Amplifies public health initiatives worldwide.

BCPH Thought Leadership for Public Health Program

The Thought Fellowship program incubates the next generation of thought leaders in public health.

Fellows participate in two months of technical training and content workshopping followed by several weeks of content creation and promotion.

THOUGHT LEADERSHIP FOR PUBLIC HEALTH FELLOWSHIP

BCPH Programs At-A-Glance

Training Opportunities

Courses and Certificate Programs @ BCPHAcademy.com

BCPHAcademy.org delivers high-quality, public health trainings on a state-of-the-art asynchronous learning platform. Courses explore intersectional public health topics, such as planetary health and climate change, and offer opportunities to earn certificates. Continuing education credits will be offered in the next year.

Public Health Leadership – In Person and Virtual Institutes

The Institutes provides intensive training in diverse public health issues to the following: rising high school juniors and seniors, college applicants and students, baccalaureate candidates, clinical and public health program candidates, and nonprofit and frontline service organization staff

Online Webinars

BCPH offers regular lunchtime trainings featuring researchers and program representatives from diverse disciplines.

Past topics have focused on social entrepreneurship, global health ethics, HIV criminalization, AI robotics in health care, maternal and child health, trauma and healing, emotionally intelligent communication, sexual health and joy, nutritional education, and LGBTQ+ health care communication, and more.

What Cannot Be Seen, Cannot Be Changed

An Exploration of Obstetric Violence, Research, System Reform, and the US Maternal Mortality Crisis

Sahana Narayan, MS, MSPH

HARVARD MEDICAL SCHOOL
TEACHING HOSPITAL
Massachusetts General Hospital
Founding Member, Mass General Brigham

BCPH Programs At-A-Glance

Awards

40 Under 40 Public Health Catalyst Awards

The awards honor those making significant advances in public health through innovative interventions, entrepreneurship, research, organizational management, intervention development, qualitative/quantitative innovation, social engagement, and more. Nominees must address issues of justice and equity, especially within underserved populations.

Health Innovators to Watch Awards

The awards honor the work of individuals who have made significant advances to the field of public health through innovative programs and interventions, entrepreneurship, research, organizational management, intervention development, qualitative/quantitative innovation, social engagement, and more. Programs must address issues of justice and equity, notably with marginalized groups.

Outstanding Practice in Public Health Award

This award celebrates outstanding contributions to public health with an eye on encouraging continued excellence and innovation, and sharing successful practices with the broader public.

Distinguished Career in Public Health Award

With this honor, BCPH celebrates individuals with a long-standing and impactful career in public health, recognizing their dedication and contributions to the field. The award is intended to inspire future generations to pursue impactful careers in public health.

BCPH Programs At-A-Glance

Original Content and Engagement

BCPH Studio

BCPH Studio produces translational knowledge through diverse mediums (blogs, vlogs, podcasts, TV series, and academic journals, including HPHR Journal) across multiple platforms (two websites, BCPH.org and BCPHR.org, YouTube, TikTok, and other social media). BCPH Studio is also the name of our YouTube Studio (YouTube.com@BCPHStudio).

Great Health Debates Series

The Great Health Debates Series convenes diverse leaders to engage in rich, thought-provoking, and critical debate of major controversies and innovations in the field of public health. Two seasons have been made so far and are available with permission on the organization's YouTube channel and as part of a learning curriculum through BCPH Studio.

5551 Hollywood Avenue, Suite #1040, Hollywood, CA 90028
communications@bcph.org | BCPH.org | BCPHR.org